Informing the future of the past

The essential set of working guidelines appropriate to all HERs, large and small, and for all staff, volunteers and students involved in managing, running, using or supporting an HER.#

These guidelines have been developed to assist those who manage, work in and use Historic Environment Records (HERs). They provide an introduction to the HERs and the services that they provide, set out agreed guidelines for working practices, support the delivery of training information and advice, and provide a guide to all aspects of HER management, working practices, standards, systems and services.

C Recording practice guidelines

Computer databases are important aids to information retrieval but, however good, they are merely tools that are used by people. To create records in these systems, people must make decisions about what information they need to retrieve, how it will be structured and how much detail to include. Different decisions are made by different individuals or even by the same person working over a period of time. These differences can cause considerable difficulties when it comes to answering a query that requires information to be retrieved.

This section of the manual will give general guidelines for creating records based on the MIDAS Heritage data standard (see B. 7.3). The aim is not to set out detailed rules for recording but to describe general principles and issues to be considered for each of the major categories of information:

- HER monuments
- HER events
- sources
