MODERN

TATE

Education Curator - Schools

Maternity Cover contract 6-8 months

Starting salary: £23,703 pa

Tate Modern houses one of the world's greatest collections of Modern Art. One of our aims is to heighten the public's perception, and understanding, of modern and contemporary art. A key aspect of this is working with schools. Through a multi-layered programme we provide an opportunity for students and teachers to engage directly with original works of art.

The challenge is a stimulating one. You will make art significant to the lives of our school visitors through developing their engagement with art and its contexts. This involves managing and developing our Gallery-based programme and also ensuring the high quality of our teachers' programme of Continuing Professional Development. It's a diverse role which incorporates work with several agencies, while being an advocate for Tate Modern within the educational sphere.

You will need a minimum of 3 years' management experience of educational programmes within an art gallery or museum setting. Your background should include work with teachers and you will understand relevant e-learning initiatives. An MA in History of Art, Cultural Theory or Fine Art is essential, as are finely-honed interpersonal and communication skills with both adults and children.
