

Modernising Government with Operational Research

Salaries to £25,000 for graduates

Higher salaries are possible for those with relevant experience

Government is all about anticipating the problems of tomorrow and finding solutions today. Government Operational Research staff use analysis and modelling in all aspects of Government business, from policy formulation through to implementation, management and evaluation.

The work of Government is immensely challenging and covers every facet of national life: from education to the environment, from trade to transport and from health to home affairs.

This variety provides unrivalled opportunities to apply your skills and gain experience, and is backed by a serious commitment to your training and professional development.

As one of the largest groups of OR staff in the UK, the Government OR Service recruits about 50 new staff each year. We are looking for people who have, or are expecting a degree (2.1 or better) or a higher degree (eg MSc, PhD) in a numerate discipline, and also for those with significant OR experience.

As a modern employer Government recognises that there is life outside work and is in the forefront in offering flexible working arrangements, and in promoting equal opportunities.

Applications may be submitted at any time during the year, but to be interviewed at the next opportunity (interviews starting 11th November 2002), you should apply by Monday 21st October 2002. To apply contact Capita RAS, Innovation Court, New Street, Basingstoke, Hampshire RG21 7JB. Tel 01325 745170 (24 hours) or fax 01256 383787 or www.capitaras.co.uk
