VISITING SCHOLARSHIPS

Academics who are planning to take sabbatical leave are invited to apply for the position of International Visiting Scholar in the Department of Geography, Queen Mary, University of London.

The Department of Geography at QMUL, graded 5A in RAE (2001), has an international reputation for theoretically-informed, empirically-grounded and politically-engaged research. We welcome applications from scholars whose work and interests coincide with the research themes of the Department: Inequality and social justice; Health and population dynamics; Culture, space and power; Quaternary environmental change; and Fluid processes.

The Department will pay up to £1000 towards the cost of air-fares and will provide desk, computer, library and office facilities for a period of up to eight weeks. Although we are unable to provide accommodation in London, the College has rooms that can be hired for £30 a night.

The Visiting Scholar will be expected to take part in Departmental research activities and to give a research seminar to staff and graduate students.

All those who are interested are advised to contact Jenn Page, Departmental Secretary (j.j.page@qmul.ac.uk) or a member of academic staff in the Department (listed at <http://www.geog.qmul.ac.uk>).
