

Would a research project of international significance look good on your CV?

The Medical Care Research Unit (MCRU) of the University Of Sheffield has an international reputation for research excellence and is particularly respected in the field of emergency care.

We are currently seeking Specialist Registrars to collaborate on a study of factors that affect in waiting times in Accident and Emergency Departments. A brief outline of the project can be found at http://www.sdo.lshtm.ac.uk/pdf/access_mason_scientific.pdf

We need to recruit Specialist Registrars from each region in England and Wales to assist in this study. No previous research experience is necessary as training will be provided.

This is a unique opportunity to collaborate on a study of international importance. Your participation in the study will be acknowledged in any subsequent publications and presentations arising from the research.

If you are interested in participating or would like further information please contact Tom Locker at the address shown below.
