Completed application forms (including two academic references, CV and a 1500 word research proposal) should reach the Dean of Graduate Studies by 31 March 2006.

MPhil in Ethnic and Racial Studies

'In my view this is the best course of its kind on offer in Europe'

(Prof Les Back, Goldsmith College London).

Applications are invited for a 12-month postgraduate degree in Ethnic and Racial Studies. The programme, the only one of its kind in Ireland, begins in October 2006. It consists of two core courses, seven one-term courses, a dissertation, plus seminar and lecture series.

Applicants should have a good first degree in the social sciences or a social science component in their first degree. In exceptional cases, applicants without a first degree may be accepted if they can demonstrate that they possess the equivalent of a good first degree. The programme attracts an ethnically diverse international student body and graduates play key roles in research and policy organisations in Ireland and globally; many have continued to PhD research.
