

The Special Group in Coaching Psychology

1st Coaching Psychology Research Conference

Monday 10th April, 2006

Northampton Suite, City University, London

To promote research into the psychology of coaching, encourage discussion into the research methodology used in the coaching psychology field and provide a forum for the sharing of evidence-informed practice, the SGCP is hosting a Research Conference, to include:

- A keynote from Professor David Lane (International Centre for the Study of Coaching at Middlesex University) on the topic of “Coaching Psychology Research as a Co-operative Venture”.
- Some of the latest thinking and research in Coaching Psychology through research papers and poster sessions.
- Kristina Gyllensten CPsychol (Coaching Psychology Unit, Department of Psychology, City University, London) - “The Challenge of Using Both Quantitative and Qualitative Methodologies in Coaching Psychology Research on a DPsych Programme”.
- Professor Stephen Palmer (Coaching Psychology Unit, Department of Psychology, City University, London) and Dr Alison Whybrow (University of Manchester) – “Coaching Psychologists: Their Practice and Opinions. A Summary of the 2005 BPS SGCP Survey”.
- Roundtable discussion.
