

4th LDHEN Symposium:

“How do Students Engage with Learning?”

Bournemouth University

12 April 2007

Keynote Speaker: Professor Ron Barnett

The theme of the Symposium is “How do Students Engage with Learning?”. The keynote speaker is Professor Ron Barnett of the Institute of Education, London University. This will be followed by a number of parallel workshops exploring themes relating to student engagement with learning. The Symposium will be held at Bournemouth University and the attendance fee is £60.

For further details, including workshop themes, and to download a conference information pack and registration form, see <http://www.lincoln.ac.uk/ldhen>

ALDinHE Inaugural Membership Meeting

ALDinHE will be officially launched at its Inaugural Meeting, which will take place at the Symposium in Bournemouth. At the meeting, the Constitution, Committee members, and other membership arrangements will be agreed.

Benefits of membership:

LDHEN will continue to operate as a JISCmail discussion list, and the archives will remain public, but those who choose to join ALDinHE will be entitled to some additional benefit, including:

- Membership of a formally constituted body, which will endeavour to represent and promote our academic and professional interests as Learning Developers across the HE sector in the UK.
- Participation: having a say in the Association's affairs and developing a shared understanding of what LD is.
- Reduced fees for events.
- A regular, edited publication based on recent list discussions.
- Additional opportunities for peer-networking, mentoring and professional development.

For a symposium registration pack and/or membership application details, email Johanna at enquiries.ldhensymposium@bournemouth.ac.uk