Recognising Dementia within the South Asian Communities

Meri Yaadain (My Memories) is an innovative award-winning* Dementia project working with South Asian communities in Bradford.

We are organising a national event to be held later in the year where the evaluation report for the project and a Good Practice Guide will be launched.

Workshops will be held to explore issues surrounding communications difficulties, tackling taboo mental health and engaging with hard-to-reach minority communities.

In order to make this conference viable, we need to know how many people are interested to see how large an event we need to plan.

* Awards:
DoH Health & Social Care
Award 2006
Care Service Improvement
Partnership Award 2006
