

The First International M-Libraries Conference

13th -14th November, 2007
The Open University
Milton Keynes, UK

This conference, hosted by The Open University in partnership with Athabasca University, aims to explore and share work carried out in libraries around the world to deliver services and resources to users 'on the move', via a growing plethora of mobile and hand-held devices.

Keynote Speakers

Joan Lippincott, Coalition for Networked Information, US

Engaging Net Gen Students in Learning: Mobility and Libraries

Dr Agnes Kukulska-Hulme, The Open University, UK

Encyclopaedic Knowledge in the Mobile Age

Dr Mohamed Ally, Athabasca University, Canada

Nomadcity and Information Access: Role of Mobile Technology

The conference will bring together researchers, technical developers, managers and library practitioners to exchange experience and expertise and generate ideas for future developments.
