

M NATIONAL MARITIME MUSEUM

O ROYAL
OBSERVATORY
GREENWICH

Learning Project Manager: Understanding Slavery Initiative

Fixed term contract August 07–April 08

£28–35k pro rata (consultants or freelancers will be considered)

This strategic role will see you create, lead and implement strategies to build and sustain audience engagement with the resources and learning approaches established through the Understanding Slavery project. As this important initiative moves into its next phase we are seeking an energetic and inspirational individual to lead and implement strategies to raise awareness, build and sustain the project outcomes including 'The Big Conversation' young people's debate as a priority.

With an in-depth knowledge of formal learning and the cultural sector you will bring a proven track record of project and budget management. You should have an excellent understanding of the needs of teachers and students and the current agendas shaping curriculum development. You will develop and build commitment to integrating the creativity and ethos of the Understanding Slavery Initiative as a strategic resource to build capacity in the effective teaching of the transatlantic slave trade and its contemporary legacies.

Understanding Slavery is a national education project which promotes the effective teaching of the transatlantic slave trade in schools and communities by encouraging teachers, educators and young people to examine this history through museum collections and archival material. Funded by the DFES and DCMS this project initiated by the National Maritime Museum has museum partnerships in Liverpool, Bristol and Hull.

nmm.ac.uk

For a full job description and details of how to apply please visit www.nmm.ac.uk/jobs

Closing date: 27 July 2007.