IMPACT - international health impact assessment consortium

Introduction

Health impact assessment (HIA) is currently the focus of considerable interest, and is being applied to relevant areas of public policy from international to local levels. The Course is aimed at all those whose current and future work is likely to require an understanding of the theory and practice of health impact assessment, for both commissioners and practitioners.

We expect that the course will be of interest to practitioners in:

- Local Government
- The Health Service
- Government Agencies
- The Voluntary Sector
- Higher Education
- Private Consultancies

Who are working in the fields of:

- Public Health
- Health and Social Care
- Socio-economic issues
- Environmental Issues
- Sustainability
- Regeneration
- Transport
- Planning
- Housing

HIA as presented on this course is based on a socio-environmental model of health, with an emphasis on qualitative evidence. The information is delivered to delegates through a highly participative approach. It is important to the successful learning outcomes of the course that all delegates are prepared to join in the process.

Course aims and objectives

This course will provide participants with the opportunity to:

- gain and develop an understanding of HIA policies, procedures and methods
- consider HIA case studies
- make decisions on when an in-depth HIA should be commissioned
- determine how and when to commission, guide and evaluate HIAs
- consider different approaches to HIA
- consider the use of HIA in their organisation
- gain an understanding of the objectives and limitations of a specific HIA method
- investigate the practical processes involved in undertaking an HIA
- participate in the delivery of an HIA
- participate in action learning sets
- become local champions of HIA in their organisations
- network with others in relation to HIA

Course content

- Understanding HIA
- Methods
- Procedures
- Evaluation
- Prioritisation
- Making it Happen

IMPACT, the International Health Impact Assessment Consortium is acknowledged as a leader in HIA. IMPACT aims to develop global capacity to assess the impact on public health of diverse policies and projects proposed by central and local government and other bodies. The HIA training is just one way in which IMPACT is working towards this.
