Institute for the History and Work of Therapeutic Environments a research and study centre of the University of Birmingham hosted by the Planned Environment Therapy Trust

I am, They Are, We Will Be: Sustainability and Therapeutic Environments

How can we build a different relationship, a non-exploitative, non-appropriative relationship to the world and to others? This seminar explores Zero-Carbon Schools, Education for Sustainable Development and Green Therapy.

Key questions include: the role of community agency in designing for well-being; what we can learn from the history and theory of alternative educational and therapeutic communities; and the relation of the social space to new practices and pedagogies. This seminar will be of interest to all those concerned with how we can build environments which encourage healthier lifestyles and sustainable behaviour?

17th October 2008, 10.30am – 5.00pm
