Those who work with young people do so in an ever widening range of contexts. They are constantly bombarded with newspaper headlines and policy statements that shape and frame their work and its environment. Increasing workloads leave little time for reflection about how best to integrate new policy and research into practice.

These issues are at the heart of this new text which aims to frame research and policy in ways that can help us to work more effectively with young people.

The book's editors, Jason Wood, Jean Hine and two other authors will be speaking at the event:

- Bernard Davis, Visiting Professor at De Montfort University
- Alan France, Professor of Social Policy Research at Loughborough University

Complimentary drinks and light refreshments will be served and copies of the book Work with Young People will be available for purchase.
