Hindsight: Policymaking for Skills and the Global Economy

Yvonne Hillier

University of Brighton

5:30 to 7:30 pm, 8th floor, Keyworth Building

Students in post-compulsory education are increasingly pushed to develop the skills to create a successful, 'world class' economy. Where do the policies underpinning this drive come from? What impact are they having on educational providers working with adults? This seminar will compare ways in which the UK and Australia are responding to the global demands for a highly skilled workforce and what this means for all those concerned with post-compulsory education.

Yvonne Hillier is Professor of Education in the Education Research Centre at the University of Brighton. She has recently conducted a review of innovation in teaching and learning in vocational education and training (VET) for the Australian National Council for Vocational Education Research. Recent publications include Everything You Need to Know About FE Policy (Continuum, 2006) and Readings in Post-Compulsory Education (with Anne Thompson) (Continuum, 2006).

Seminars are free and open to all but you are asked to book in advance. For further information and to book: Alison Britton Tel: 020-7815-6498 E-mail: alison.britton@lsbu.ac.uk
