

Information Day

at the

British Geological Survey

Friday 4 December 2009

The British Geological Survey invites you to a tour of its information resources, encompassing its Records Centre, Materials Collections, Library, Enquiry services, and 3D Visualisation Suite on the morning of Friday, 4 December 2009. The tour will focus on the value of our extensive holdings and how we manage them. Highlighting geological surveying techniques, both current and historical, the tour will show the wide variety of information we can provide for engineers, geologists, planners, academics, consultants and others.

There will also be an opportunity to preview displays and demonstrations that will be open to the general public on Saturday 5 December, in support of the national Archives Awareness Campaign 2009 (www.archiveawareness.com). The BGS theme this year is "Voyages of Discovery – from Darwin to the Moon and beyond" (www.bgs.ac.uk).

You are welcome to stay for lunch and, during the afternoon, to explore individual sections of our archives at greater length.

Due to the nature of our work we are only able to provide this type of access on an annual basis and places are limited. We hope this is of interest and that you and your colleagues will be able to attend.

There is no charge for this event, to book a place please contact Becky White, tel: 0115 936 3021, email: rwh@bgs.ac.uk.

British Geological Survey, Keyworth, Nottingham, NG12 5GG

