Invites you to join our

Intercultural Clinical Case Discussion Seminars NAFC01-05

How do differences of race, culture and ethnicity enter into the clinical process? These seminars offer psychotherapists an opportunity to explore and develop their intercultural psychotherapeutic thinking and practice and continuous professional development in this important area of psychotherapeutic work.

The seminars will take the form of clinical case discussion groups with an emphasis on the integration of issues of race and culture with generic psychotherapeutic practice. They will address the role of political, social and cultural contexts in the lives of clients and therapists and the relevance of this in the consulting room and for best practice. Participants will be required to bring case material.

Who is it for ?

The seminars are aimed at individual and family psychotherapists and other mental health professionals working cross-culturally.
