Wandering Subjects: Movement and Displacement in Spanish Peninsular Studies

Sujetos itinerantes: Movimiento y desplazamiento en los estudios peninsulares españoles

Throughout the centuries, Spanish Peninsular literature and culture have been characterized by an active production that explores several notions of movement, making it difficult to define this term while also suggesting that the process of moving is a defining characteristic of Spanish identity in itself. Moving or movement is not limited to just traveling from one geographical or physical point to another. Rather, it is a broader concept that can also represent the displacement caused by the move, the distance between two or more time periods, the intellectual and conceptual processes of reading, the commotion created by an event (historical, textual, cultural, etc.), the crossing between borders (physical and literal), as well as a political insurgency or rebellion, to name a few.

This special volume of Revista CIEHL will examine various ways in which some conceptualizations of movement offer strategic and critical readings of Spain's culture and literature in distinct historical moments. The volume will accept papers covering several time periods including the 13th to 17th centuries or Early Modern Spain, the 18th and 19th centuries, the Pre-Franco years, as well as Post-Franco and the 21st century or Democratic Spain. This volume will also encourage articles that focus on some of these issues related to Catalan, Basque and/or Galician Studies.

Papers should be 15-20 pages long in MLA format with notes at the end of the paper followed by the list of works cited. In addition to the title and a 300 word abstract (in both English and Spanish), please include your mailing address, phone number, institutional affiliation and e-mail address. Papers will be accepted in either Spanish or English. Please submit articles electronically in Word format by June 18, 2010 to:
