Professional Development Seminar Series

April – June 2010

Professional Development Seminar Series

April 29 2010 Manchester Art Gallery

Craft, makers and making

How can galleries support young people's engagement with craft, makers and making? With a renewed focus on the value of making in the curriculum supported by new gallery-based initiatives, this seminar will cover the policy background, showcase a range of gallery projects and explore opportunities for young people and the crafts in formal and informal learning. With contributions from Ofsted and the Crafts Council. Supported by the Crafts Council and the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council.

May 10 2010 British Museum

Older people and intergenerational learning

How can galleries and artists contribute to the delivery of creative provision for older people? This seminar will draw on the findings of engage Cymru's recent research project into working with older people in galleries, to investigate the potential for galleries in England to further develop this work. With contributions from the Beth Johnson Foundation and galleries involved in the engage Cymru research. Supported by engage Cymru and the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council.

June 4 2010 Orleans House Gallery

Working with local authority Children's Services

How are galleries meeting the needs of local authority Children's Services? This seminar will provide information about Local Area Agreements and the targets Children's Services are working towards. Delegates will find out how they can work in partnership with Children's Services to develop creative programmes for young people. With contributions from local authority staff and participants from phase 4 of the enquire programme. Supported by enquire.

engage's Professional Development Seminars are for gallery and museum educators, artists and makers with some experience of gallery education. Teachers or freelance staff working with galleries have also found these seminars useful.

The seminars provide a forum to:

- Expand core skills and knowledge
- Explore and develop methodology
- Discuss and share practice with peers
- Review recent policy developments
- Build national and regional knowledge, contacts and networks

engage's Professional Development Seminars run from 10.45am–4pm and include lunch. Each seminar includes two or more specialist presentations, case studies, subject specific briefings, opportunities for participation, lunch and networking.

Each seminar is supported by a printed toolkit which reinforces and expands the session theme.

engage is the leading organisation promoting access to and enjoyment of the visual arts through gallery education using advocacy, professional development and research.
