

The focus of work in the historic environment is the analysis and interpretation of a wide range of rural and urban landscapes in order to discern the history and/or archaeology of their origins and development. Fields, canals and waterways, the designed landscapes of parks and gardens, house sites and surviving buildings, military earthworks and those relating to religious belief can all better be understood through interpretation of existing features, upstanding mounds, banks and ditches, as well as soil and crop marks identified in air photographs. The underlying topography and geography add yet another dimension, together with place- and field-names, historic documents, old and modern maps, and natural history.

The archaeology and history of landscapes and gardens is a fascinating and exciting interdisciplinary field. It allows us to glimpse, however opaquely, a world that has been lost and sometimes to see it as it may have been in the past, revealing successive or overlapping phases of planning, modification, re-use or ruin.

The Historic Environment Research Conferences programme presents three one-day research conferences spread across the academic year, whose aims are

- to bring together leading scholars in their fields, academic and professional, to discuss new and/or unpublished innovative research;
- to provide an opportunity for all those interested in the historic environment to engage with this work, including members of the public, professionals, scholars, policy-makers and volunteers.

The McDonald Institute for Archaeological Research is a post-doctoral research institute within the Faculty of Archaeology and Anthropology of the University of Cambridge. It exists to further research by Cambridge archaeologists and their collaborators into all aspects of the human past, across time and space. It sponsors seminar series, workshops, and international conferences.

In this role the Institute independently supports archaeological fieldwork, other archaeological research, research fellows, visiting scholars, conferences and publications. It aims to provide an interdisciplinary centre for archaeology in Collegiate Cambridge, serving staff in a variety of departments, faculties, museums and colleges, and is the 'research school' of the Department of Archaeology.

Important notes

Enquiries and enrolments - Enquiries, including those regarding special access, should be directed to Dr Susan Oosthuizen either by email on smo23@cam.ac.uk or by post to HERC, c/o McDonald Institute for Archaeological Research, Department of Archaeology, University of Cambridge, Downing Street, Cambridge CB2 3ER. Phone enquiries (office hours only) 0758 3151685. International enquirers should email Dr Oosthuizen in the first instance.

Receipts - Please note that receipts will be sent by email. If you require a paper receipt, please enclose a stamped addressed envelope with your application.

Cancellation policy - Cancellations received two weeks before the conference are eligible for a refund but not for the return of the registration fee (15% of the fee) which is non-returnable and non-transferable unless the conference is cancelled by the organiser. Cancellations received less than two weeks before the conference will not be eligible for a refund.

Maps of the venue - The Faculty of Law is on the University of Cambridge's Sidgwick Site, west of the city centre. Map directions to Cambridge and the location of the Sidgwick site can be found on www.cam.ac.uk/map. A detailed map of the Sidgwick site can be found on <http://www.cam.ac.uk/map/v4/drawmap.cgi?mp=sidg;tl=Sidgwick%20Site> - the Faculty of Law is marked as 10 on that map, and the car parks are marked as P. If you require a paper copy of these maps, please enclose a stamped addressed envelope with your application.

Lunch will not be provided. Do bring a packed lunch if you wish. Alternatively, there are pubs and cafes within walking distance in the city centre.

Parking - There is plentiful parking on the Sidgwick site for those attending the conferences and the car parks are marked on the maps listed above.

Client's responsibility - If, in the reasonable opinion of the McDonald Institute, the presence of any speaker or conference attendee is an impediment to the provision of any service of the McDonald Institute or brings the McDonald Institute (and/or the University of Cambridge) into disrepute, the McDonald Institute may exclude such person from all or part of that service. In these circumstances the McDonald Institute will return any booking fee paid by or for the individual, but there will be no liability of the McDonald Institute.

Changes to the programme - Whilst every effort is made to avoid changes to the programme, published details may be altered without notice, at any time. The McDonald Institute reserves the right to withdraw or amend any part of this programme without notice.
