Music & Medicine invites researchers and clinicians in neuroscience, medicine, music therapy, education, computer science, engineering and technology to submit original articles that focus on music technologies for health and development, and as an evaluative tool to assess responses to music. Of particular interest are papers with an emphasis on:

- Clinical practice with electronic music technologies for people with special needs in a diverse range of clinical and community settings
- Engineering and design of music and assistive technologies with potential application in clinical or community settings
- Measurement and evaluation using technology for measuring musical responses e.g. brain imaging/PET/ EEG; clinical evaluation systems

SAGETRACK makes it easy to:

- Submit your article online

Music and Medicine is an interdisciplinary journal that is an integrative forum for clinical practice and research related to music interventions and applications of clinical music strategies in medicine. Each peer-reviewed issue offers original articles, case studies, editorial commentaries, and interviews from clinical medicine, the neurosciences, behavioral sciences, nursing, and social work that translate music, music psychology, music cognition, music neurology, and music therapy into scientifically valid clinical applications. Music and Medicine's goal is to bring together information that is currently scattered across many disciplines throughout many publications.
