

Big Ears

sonic art for public ears

CALL FOR APPLICATIONS

The Sonic Arts Research Centre (SARC) is calling for applications from doctoral students (at any stage of their research) with a music/sonic arts/performance background, in particular from those researchers with an interest in new technologies.

The course 'BIG EARS sonic art for public ears' runs from 14 - 16 April 2011 and will deliver training in communication skills, public engagement and will offer hands-on experiences for researchers in linking with an audience facilitated by Northern Ireland's leading children's arts organisation, Young at Art www.youngatart.co.uk.

On the final day (16 April 2011) PhD researchers will work closely with local children and will showcase the outcomes that were designed during the course. The showcase will be a public event to be staged at SARC, a cutting-edge space, geared towards new technological developments.

To apply for a place in the three day course please click here and fill out the application form or contact Franziska Schroeder f.schroeder@qub.ac.uk for more information. Candidates are required to submit a 500 word statement and two references, the deadline for applications is 25 January 2011.

Queen's University
Belfast

SONICARTSRESEARCHCENTRE

young at art.