

PhD Conference 2011

Generating New Knowledge through Quantitative Approaches to Social Science

Monday 16th May 2011

University of Edinburgh Business School,
29 Buccleuch Place, Edinburgh

The Applied Quantitative Methods Network (AQMeN) is pleased to announce a Conference for all PhD students in Scotland who are studying a social science subject, and use or plan to use quantitative methods of data analysis in their doctoral research.

The conference will provide an opportunity for students to present their work to academics and other PhD students and receive feedback. It will also provide an important networking opportunity allowing students to establish contacts with other students and researchers who use quantitative methods.

Professor Ian Diamond, Principal of the University of Aberdeen and former Chief Executive of the Economic and Social Research Council will open the conference with a talk about the role of quantitative research in generating new knowledge.

Places are limited, please register via:
