

Shillourokambos

A Neolithic settlement in Cyprus

Excavations of the first part (secteur 1)
Conducted by Jean Guilaine, François Briois, Jean-Denis Vigne

Shillourokambos is one of the oldest Neolithic sites of Cyprus. It was founded circa 8500 years BC and occupied more or less without any interruption until about 7000 BC. Dealing with the first part of the locality (Secteur 1), this book describes its various fitting-outs, most of them attributed to the oldest phases of occupation; it also depicts archeological and fauna materials corresponding.

This major site contributes in an essential way to the knowledge of the various settling and domestication processes in the Near East as well as in the Eastern basin of the Mediterranean. On this site, one can also find the most ancient listed traces of the domestication of the cat, a surprising system of Neolithic wells together with the oldest anthropological signs of the island.
