ARE YOU PASSIONATE ABOUT PUBLIC HEALTH?

TWO NEW EXCITING POSTS TO DEVELOP PUBLIC HEALTH RESEARCH AND PUBLIC HEALTH CURRICULUM AT POSTGRADUATE LEVEL

Senior Lecturer/Principal Lecturer in Public Health (Health Protection) – Ref: ACHS3592

Senior Lecturer/Principal Lecturer in Public Health (Healthcare Commissioning) - Ref: ACHS3593

Senior Lecturer salary: £37,990 - £45,336 per annum

Principal Lecturer salary: £46,696 - £52,556 per annum

You will be appointed to the appropriate grade and salary dependent upon knowledge and experience.

Two full-time posts, permanent, based at our Putteridge Bury campus, Luton.

As part of the expansion of the Institute for Health Research (IHR), applications are invited for the posts of Principal Lecturer/Senior Lecturer in Public Health in the areas of Health Protection and Healthcare Commissioning respectively.

Ideally, you should have a PhD in a public health related discipline and a commitment to further developing your externally funded public health research programme to inform your high-quality publication track record, as well as a commitment to further developing your public health teaching expertise at Postgraduate level. One post will have a specific focus on leading the Health Protection teaching, and the other post will have a specific focus on leading the Healthcare Commissioning teaching - on the successful Masters in Public Health programme, and providing supervision relating to PhD students.

The IHR is the 'umbrella' Institute, incorporating the following research groupings: Health Inequalities, Public Health and Healthcare Commissioning Research. The IHR is also part of the East of England NHS Research Design Service (RDS) which receives core funding from the NHS National Institute for Health Research.
