

ALPSP Seminar

Data Publishing

Tuesday 24 April 2012

2 Carlton House Terrace, London SW1Y 5AF

Chair: Cathy Kennedy, Senior Publisher, Life Science, Oxford University Press

The digital world has vastly increased options for what we do with data. Data has emerged from dog-eared notebooks and spawned research institutes, journals, businesses, and controversy. This one day seminar will look at opportunities and challenges in data publishing from the points of view of policy makers, publishers, data generators, and consumers. It will examine everything from access and deposition policies to curation and deposition.

Who should attend: Publishers, librarians, and journal editors in STM and the social sciences who need to be aware of the emerging possibilities for enabling access to data associated with the research they are publishing, and who want to keep abreast of the debate surrounding access to data.
