

Appeal from the Hull Geological Society

There has been considerable damage caused by rabbits to the important Rifle Butts site described by Kendall and Wroot as "at the very heart of the Market Weighton anticline" and the YWT now have funding for the protective work planned two years ago. If things go to plan HGS will be asking its members to volunteer to help over two weekends in October following the Conference/YGS indoor meeting at Hull University. There is plenty to be done - ripping off the old netting, doing some work on the slumped section and covering with new netting. If volunteers register with the YWT through Mike Horne (mike@horne28.freemove.co.uk) they will be insured.

Are there any YGS members who might be prepared to help Mike and his team who, over the years, have made valiant efforts to protect this stratigraphically significant site?
