Sheffield Political Economy Research Institute

Research Fellow

Overview

The Sheffield Political Economy Research Institute (SPERI) aims to bring together leading international researchers in the social sciences, including policy-makers, journalists and opinion formers, to reassess and develop substantive proposals to respond to the political and economic challenges posed by the global financial crisis and its legacy.

SPERI takes a holistic view of political economy in which the local, the national, the regional and the global interact at all times and in complex ways. Its research agenda reflects this and addresses in an interconnected way some of the major issues of our day, notably:

- the British growth crisis
- the building of a new political architecture for the Eurozone
- the rise of the BRICs and the emergence of changing forms of capitalism in East Asia, Latin America and Africa
- the G20's leadership and management of the global political economy and the role of other leading global institutions.

SPERI will also seek to explore what we see as the core economic and political question that connects all of these issues: namely, the need to think through the key elements of a sustainable new model of political economy. This must be capable of meeting the diverse needs of a world characterised by the legacy of financial crisis, ongoing environmental degradation and continued political uncertainty.

We now seek to appoint an exceptional Research Fellow to help shape, develop and lead SPERI's research agenda over the next three years.

You will hold a PhD in a relevant area (or have equivalent experience) and maintain research activity of a substantial external reputation. This will be achieved through: generating research income and direction for self and others, conducting high quality research, producing research publications of exceptional quality and impact, supervising research students and research staff, participating actively in the development and implementation of the department and the Faculty's research strategy.

Job Description

Main Duties and Responsibilities

- Conduct internationally recognised innovative research, as well as encouraging and supporting research activities of other staff across the Faculty.
- Develop funding strategies, identify and prepare quality applications for, and the management of, external research grants.
- Generate research funding to finance research projects through applications to the appropriate bodies.
- Disseminate research findings through publications in high impact journals and the presentation of keynote papers at conferences.
- Supervise and attract high quality postgraduate students.
- Review manuscripts for peer-reviewed journals and research grants for national and international research funders.
- Contribute significantly to the development and implementation of the Faculty research strategy.
- Be involved in professional activities such as refereeing papers, editing journals, refereeing research grants, external examining, organising conferences, committee membership and involvement with professional bodies.
- Contribute to, and support, research-led learning and teaching activities.
- Any other duties, commensurate with the grade of the post.

Person Specification

Applicants should provide evidence in their applications that they meet the following criteria. We will use a range of selection methods to measure candidates' abilities in these areas including reviewing your on-line application, seeking references, inviting shortlisted candidates to interview and other forms of assessment action relevant to the post.

Applicants should include in their application a 3000 word (maximum) post-doctoral research fellowship application, indicating clearly its links to SPERI's core research focus and at least one of the five research themes, as well as its potential to generate user and/or policy-maker impact.

A fuller statement of SPERI's research focus is available at: www.sheffield.ac.uk/speri.
