

Faculty of Social Sciences

School of Psychology

The School of Psychology (www.uea.ac.uk/psy) is the newest school at the University of East Anglia, and the first new School of Psychology to be formed in a research-intensive university for many years. The establishment of the school signals UEA's commitment to investment in world-class research and research-led teaching in this discipline. UEA has a thriving BPS-recognised psychology BSc undergraduate programme developed prior to the establishment of the new school.

Professor in Psychology • REF: ATR1094

Lecturer/Senior Lecturer/Reader/Professor in Psychology (five posts) • REF: ATR1095

Chair: A competitive salary package is available for outstanding candidates

Senior Lecturer/Reader: £45,486 to £52,706 per annum

Lecturer: £38,140 to £44,166 per annum

We seek excellent researchers to complement the existing psychology staff in the first phase of a growth strategy for the new school. Up to six new appointments are available across all levels that represent opportunities for international research leaders to impact upon the future shape of psychology at UEA. One of these posts (ATR1094) is at Professor level and the remaining five posts could be appointed at any level.

Applicants will be outstanding researchers (in a REF context), with experience and track records commensurate with stage of career. Applicants in any area will be considered, but those with expertise in cognition, vision and action, differential psychobiology or developmental psychology are particularly encouraged to apply. We also seek applicants who can demonstrate synergies with other schools/faculties, commensurate with the multidisciplinary ethos at UEA, and the world-leading facilities the Norwich Research Park affords.

These posts are available on an indefinite full-time basis from 1 February 2013 or as soon as possible thereafter. Applicants must have a PhD or equivalent qualification (or for Lecturer be nearing completion with award within one year of commencement) and be able to satisfy all other essential criteria for the role.

To arrange an informal discussion with Professor Kenny Coventry, Head of the School of Psychology, please contact his Personal Assistant, Jackie Orford (j.orford@uea.ac.uk or 01603 597146).

Closing date for all posts: 12 noon on 6 December 2012.

Further particulars and an application form are available on our website: www.uea.ac.uk/hr/jobs/ or Tel. 01603 593493.