

The Hong Kong Institute of Education is a publicly funded tertiary institution offering a full range of academic programmes at doctoral, master, bachelor and postgraduate diploma levels as well as other professional development programmes to over 8,000 students, serving teachers and professionals studying in education and related humanities, social sciences, and arts and culture disciplines. The Institute has a Graduate School and three Faculties, namely, Faculty of Education and Human Development, Faculty of Humanities, and Faculty of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences; comprising altogether 16 Departments, with about 400 academic/teaching staff. It now features four Institute-level research centres and ten Faculty-level research and development centres, covering various areas of expertise in Education, Social Sciences and the Liberal Arts.

The Institute aspires to become a leading university in the Asia Pacific region, focusing on Education and complementary disciplines, and recognised for its excellence in nurturing competent and caring professionals and the impact of scholarship. If you are excited by the prospect of contributing your expertise to the development of a leading multidisciplinary institution at the heart of East Asia, we would like to hear from you.

The Institute invites applications for the following posts:

Assistant Professor/Lecturer (Ref: AsstProf/ Lect/APS/1012)
Department of Asian & Policy Studies
Faculty of Liberal Arts & Social Sciences

The Department of Asian and Policy Studies, a newly created Department within the Faculty of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences (FLASS), is a research intensive Department offering programmes at the undergraduate and postgraduate level. As part of its mission to become a leading centre for policy research and teaching in the region, the Department invites applications for a full-time position in Public Administration, Public Management or Public Policy. Candidates with expertise in the following areas are particularly encouraged to apply: public sector financial management, policy analysis, performance measurement and evaluation, social policy, business-government relations, regulation and regulatory analysis.

Applicants should have a doctoral degree in Public Policy, Political Science, Public Administration or a related discipline, an established record of research, teaching experience, and the ability to engage with policy and research communities in Asia and around the world. PhD students in their final year may be considered for the post of Lecturer.

The successful appointee will participate in activities related to research, curriculum and programme development, programme and course management at the undergraduate and postgraduate levels, and teaching.

Application Procedure

Applicants should submit, in electronic form (MS Word or PDF file), a Cover Note, detailed curriculum vitae, teaching dossier including teaching evaluations (where available), representative samples of course outlines, and a brief statement of research.
