

A lecture by Professor Alistair Ross
'Young people's constructions of identity in Slovenia'
Part of the Jean Monnet Lecture series

Wed 22 May ■ 5.30pm ■ Room GCG-08

London Metropolitan University, 166-220 Holloway Road, London N7 8DB

Slovenia was established as a state in June 1991 when it was the first state to split from Yugoslavia, and joined the European Union in 2004. One of the more affluent of the new members, but with a population of about two million, the young people in the study comprise a generation born into major changes, and have developed their ideas of their identity in greatly different circumstances to their parents and grandparents. Based on focus groups in Slovenia, the research included a wide variety of young people, including those from the Roma minority.

Delivered by Professor Alistair Ross of the Institute of Policy Studies in Education (IPSE), the lecture will be the seventh in the Jean Monnet Lecture Series: Border Crossings, Moving Borders.

For more event information, please email Angela Kamara at a.kamara@londonmet.ac.uk.

To book your place, visit jeanmonnetslovenia.eventbrite.co.uk

