

Tenure-Track Positions at the Center for German Studies

The Hebrew University of Jerusalem

The Center for German Studies at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem seeks to fill two half-tenure-track positions beginning in October 2014. This search is open to scholars in all sub-fields of Political Science, International Relations or Sociology pertaining to contemporary Germany. Junior and senior scholars are encouraged to apply.

Candidates will have to apply for the second half of the tenure-track position to one of the calls of the Departments of Political Science, International Relations or Sociology.

Ideal candidates are expected to have a record of publication of innovative and high-quality research in top-tier journals and/or books. They are also expected to present a substantial scholarly agenda.

The language of teaching at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem is Hebrew (though some courses are taught in English). New faculty are expected to be able to teach in Hebrew within two years.

To apply, please submit a letter of intent stating willingness to begin teaching in the fall of 2014, a list of required and elective courses the candidate can teach at the Hebrew University, a scientific biography, CV, three recent publications, and at least three letters of recommendation.

All application materials should be submitted electronically to:

Prof. Ruth Fine
Head of the Center for German Studies
Director of the European Forum at the Hebrew University
Faculty of Social Sciences
The Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Mt. Scopus
91905 Jerusalem, Israel
msgger@savion.huji.ac.il

The deadline for applications is October 1, 2013.

Candidates selected by the department will have to compete with candidates from other departments in the Faculty of Social Sciences.

For more information about the Center for German Studies, please visit our webpage:
<http://www.cgs.huji.ac.il/>.