The 2014 edition of the Summer School on Human Rights, Minorities and Diversity Management explores the theme of political participation, with a focus on national minorities, indigenous peoples and migrants.

Selected topics

- Established and innovative forms and instruments of political participation for national minorities, migrants and indigenous people
- Direct democracy and its implications for minority groups
- Political participation of right wing and populist parties in democratic states as a challenge for minority groups

We offer thought-provoking seminars by leading academics, lawyers and practitioners working in international organisations, complemented by interactive group activities and hypothetical case studies.
