- Discusses concepts of race and ethnicity in an integrated way, enabling the reader to build up a solid foundation of knowledge
- Practical applications of each concept are illustrated with examples, allowing the reader to learn about how basic ideas are used in practice
- Each chapter contains educational objectives, a summary, and exercises throughout to aid and encourage interactive learning

The globalization of trade and increasing international travel and migration poses huge challenges for health practitioners and policy makers who have to meet legal and policy obligations to provide health care of equal quality and effectiveness for all.

Migration, Ethnicity, Race, and Health in Multicultural Societies provides an accessible introduction to the complex issues of race, ethnicity and minority populations. The book explains the process of migration and the uses and misuses of the key concepts of race and ethnicity, illustrating their strengths and weaknesses in epidemiology, policy making, health service planning, research, health care and health promotion.

Including many examples from around the world to demonstrate the theory in a practical way, and written in a clear and straightforward style with all terminology explained, this is an ideal book for all students and professionals in the field of migration, ethnicity and race in the health care context.
