

NOWHERE TO CALL HOME

A TIBETAN IN BEIJING

"Upends popular perceptions of Tibetans... deeply moving."
— Jonathan Watts, The Guardian

A FILM BY JOCELYN FORD

Thursday 5 February 2015
6pm

Nowhere To Call Home tells the powerful story of a Tibetan widow who stands up to her authoritarian father-in-law so her son can get an education. The documentary “breaks down the sometimes romantic Shangri-La view that Westerners have of Tibet... and offers a shocking portrait of the outright racism... Tibetans face in Chinese parts of the country” (New York Times). The groundbreaking film has won accolades in China from both Tibetans and Han Chinese and is paving the way for a new conversation.

A panel discussion will follow, featuring the film maker, Jocelyn Ford, and a panel of specialists from the Universities of Birmingham and Nottingham
