

SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT MANAGEMENT INSTITUTE

Sustainable Development Management Institute (SDMI), believes that learning is an essential dimension of the human existence, thus it is a life-long experience.

Learning engages people, as well as the social entities they constitute, throughout the lifespan. It is a fundamental for all human beings who interact constructively with an evermore rapidly changing complex environment and to be able to do so being fully aware of the history of humankind.

Learning is therefore a crucial dimension of sustainable development. We feel that learning is inherently social activity and thus we take into consideration the learning individuals in the context of learning communities.

Learning communities have different levels of organizational complexity. Each individual is normally part of a variety of learning communities, such as a school or training context, the family, places of worship, the workplace, the marketplace.

SDMI has built its reputation on developing conscientious management executives who make impact because of their ability to think beyond the immediate or obvious. We don't just arm the executives with valuable tools, we help them to understand and evaluate just when and where these tools can most usefully be applied. So that when complex business scenarios are encountered, they have the means to understand the situation, analyse the problem, and generate genuinely viable solutions.

The demands which this program will place on you, while you are attending workshops and in the work you complete for your assignments, are designed to make you:

- critical and reflective, capable of questioning information, data and assumptions and able to adopt a critical and evaluative approach to management theory, practice, processes and behaviors
- sensitive to cultural differences and ethical challenges – aware of how these impact on management decisions and able to respond appropriately
- an effective communicator, both in writing and orally
- a skilled team player, adept at building and maintaining effective relationships with professional colleagues and at assessing both your own contribution and that of others
- highly effective at learning and planning – prioritising, ordering and managing work
- able to identify your own strengths and weaknesses and set your own goals for self-development.

SDMI is a leader in educational curriculum development, professional development and learning solutions to the extent that clients will consider SDMI as their provider of choice
