

BBC Pride and Prejudice 1995: Reflections Around a Much-Loved Production

A one-day conference with speakers including
Simon Langton, Director of the 1995 production

Saturday 5 September 2015
10.00 am – 6.00 pm

Chawton House Library

Home to early English women's writing

In September 1995, a production of Jane Austen's Pride and Prejudice aired on BBC One. Adapted by Andrew Davies, produced by Sue Birtwistle and directed by Simon Langton, this six-part serial made instant stars of several of the actors and gripped the nation.

Twenty years on, Chawton House Library invites you to a day of talks to celebrate and commemorate this landmark in television history. Speakers who have published widely on Jane Austen in adaptation will reflect on the place of Pride and Prejudice in popular culture before and after 1995. Simon Langton, Director, will reminisce on his own role, and the day will close with a roundtable involving some of the original cast and crew.

Speakers include: Sayre Greenfield (University of Pittsburg, Greensburg); Simon Langton, Director of the 1995 production, whose credits include many period-drama productions for television; Devoney Looser (Arizona State University); Nora Nachumi (Yeshiva University); Linda Troost (Washington and Jefferson College, Pennsylvania), and Juliette Wells (Goucher College).

Registration: £55 (includes lunch and evening drinks reception)
Students/Friends £45
