Transnationalizing Inequalities in Europe

Sociocultural Boundaries, Assemblages and Regimes of Intersection

Anna Amelina, Goethe-University Frankfurt am Main, Germany

Series: Routledge Research in Transnationalism

This volume combines transnational, intersectional and cultural-sociological perspectives to analyze patterns, contexts and mechanisms of cross-border inequalities. The theory developed is illustrated by empirical research on migrations in Europe, specifically on recent migrations between Ukraine and Germany, as paradigmatic processes for the study of spatialized cross-border inequalities.

"Transnationalizing Inequalities in Europe is a highly original volume that builds on theories of globalization, transnationalization, spatialization, boundaries, and intersectionality to examine cross-border social inequalities."

Jeff Hearn, Örebro University, Sweden; Hanken School of Economics, Finland; University of Huddersfield, UK; author of Men of the World

"Amelina's thinking is as sharp as the inequalities she maps, and as subtle as some of the mechanisms of power she uncovers."

Professor William Walters, Department of Political Science & Department of Sociology/Anthropology, Carleton University, Canada

"Anna Amelina's book is a pioneering, outstanding work... A must read for students and scholars of migration- gender- and social inequality studies."

Helma Lutz, Goethe University Frankfurt, Author of 'The New Maids. Transnational Women and the Care Economy'

"The book succeeds in developing a grid for a cultural sociological approach to inequality analyses which constitute the current research frontier... What makes is worthwhile reading is a critical analysis of Europe from its periphery."

Professor Thomas Faist, Bielefeld University
