

CONTENTS

Illustrations	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	1
1. Apocalyptic History, Protestant Politics, and Allegorical Methodology in the Revelation Commentaries	45
2. Protestant Church Historiography and Revelation Commentaries and the Asia Minor Narratives	85
3. The Early Asia Minor Narratives and the Primitive Church	141
4. Apocalyptic Arcadia and Elizabethan England	177
5. Feeding upon Urania's "Sweet Words": Overthrowing Antichrist through Devotion to the Word	211
6. Erasmus in Arcadia	249
7. Cecropia, Amphialus, and the Church of Antichrist	287
8. Amphialus and the Half-Reformed Church of England	315
9. The English Church under the Tudor Queens in Sidney's Topical Allegory	351
10. Sidney's Revised Arcadia as Epic and Apocalypse: An Overview	401
Bibliography	487
Index of Biblical References	513
General Index	517

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I am delighted to acknowledge the numerous debts that I incurred during the protracted period in which I composed and revised this book. I am grateful to my dissertation committee, John N. King, David O. Frantz, and Lisa Klein, for their acute feedback upon my dissertation and for their much-appreciated support. My great debt to the ground-breaking scholarship of my director, Dr. King, will also be at least partially evident from my citations of his works. I am immensely grateful to Dr. Frantz for generous and kind support beyond the call of duty throughout the many years in which I worked on the dissertation. I would like to thank, too, Professors Mary Carruthers and John Gabel for outstanding teaching that first sparked the interests in memory and in Sidney that, after an exceedingly long and winding road, gave rise to this book and Professor Joseph Lynch for truly superb teaching that deepened my interest in church history. Many thanks to Alex Dunlop and Phoebe Spinrad for reading sections of this project and for encouragement.

I am profoundly grateful to Thomas P. Roche and to the late Victor Skretkowicz for their enthusiastic responses to my work on Sidney and Tasso at its early stages.

Paula Backscheider provided invaluable advice concerning publication and other professional matters. I am grateful to my department chair, Jeremy Downes, for working to gain support for research by non-tenure track faculty members. I am indebted to Wiebke Kuhn of Auburn for patient help with a number of technical matters relating to this book. Mark Braunstein of Connecticut College and Patrick Graham and Margaret Peddle of the Pitts Theology Library at Emory University graciously assisted with images. I thank librarians at Auburn University and the Ohio State University for their expeditious processing of my numerous interlibrary-loan requests.

I am most grateful to Robert Bjork of the Arizona Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies for his interest in my project and to Roy Rukkila of ACMRS for his extreme patience during the long period in which I completed my revisions of the book and for his welcome good will and expertise in responding to my many queries. I was particularly fortunate to have Leslie MacCoull of ACMRS edit my manuscript. In addition to her masterly stylistic revisions and assistance with formatting, Dr. MacCoull most generously shared her encyclopedic knowledge, and I am indebted to her for many a learned reference. Sharo-nah Fredrick and Todd Halvorsen of ACMRS provided adept assistance during the final stages of the book's production. I would like to thank as well the two anonymous readers whose probing questions and beneficent suggestions greatly improved the version of this project that I first submitted to ACMRS. Remaining errors and infelicities are, of course, my own responsibility.

Of course, my most long-standing debt, to my parents, is incalculable, and I am most thankful to them. I am also grateful to the rest of my family for their rejuvenating support and patience with my odd obsessions. This book is dedicated to James Goldstein with gratitude for his sustaining love, friendship, wisdom, and humor, as well as for expert commentary on my Introduction.

An earlier version of Chapter 7 appeared as "Cecropia and the Church of Antichrist in Sir Philip Sidney's New Arcadia," SEL: Studies in English Literature 1500–1900 38 (1998): 19–43. A few sections of Chapter 10 appeared in "Jerusalem Delivered and the Allegory of Sidney's Revised Arcadia," Modern Philology 101 (2004): 337–370. A short section of Chapter 4 appeared in "Under the pretty tales of Wolves and Sheep: Sidney's Ambassadorial Table Talk and Protestant Hunting Dialogues," Spenser Studies 14 (2000): 273–90. Earlier versions of some sections of the book were presented as papers delivered at the 2006 and 2008 conferences of the Society for Renaissance Studies at the University of Edinburgh and Trinity College Dublin, respectively; and at the International Congress on Medieval Studies in Kalamazoo, Michigan, in 2001 and 2013.

In quotations from primary sources, I follow modern conventions in use of u/v, i/j, and w, and I silently expand contractions.