

CRAFTING WOMEN'S LEADERSHIP

A creative collaboration between Mora School Women's Project and King's College London

The week long residency in the pop up space by parents from a North London primary school is an exciting opportunity to disseminate the groups unique stories, both from the womens' individual viewpoints and also in relation to the project at the school.

The workshop sessions will share the womens' experiences through discussion and visual means together with a number of accessible hands on creative activities. These will include screen printing, papier mache, quick paper and textile crafts and participants will make small samples of work to take home.
