Critical Community Psychology

Critical Action and Social Change

Carolyn Kagan, Mark Burton, Paul Duckett, Rebecca Lawthom and Asiya Siddiquee

This accessible textbook provides an overview of theoretical and practical issues around psychological work in a range of community settings. Covering key issues including migration, social justice, and the environment, the three sections of the book allow students to think, act, and reflect on their work. The book utilises examples and reflections on practice drawn from years of experience of the authors which helps students to see the application of theory and encourages them to engage in their own critical thinking. This is the ideal resource for students of different community based professions, working in a range of applied settings, at both undergraduate and postgraduate levels.

Reviews

'This is a wonderful, exciting book. In this time of austerity, it is easy to despair, but this book offers lots of examples of how to get involved in working with others to create a better world. It moves beyond theory to describe different forms of collective action and inspires hope about social change. Another world, a better world is possible but action without reflection can threaten progress.' - Michael Murray, Emeritus Professor of Social & Health Psychology, Keele University, UK

'The second edition of this ground-breaking volume maintains the excellent approach of the first volume... It has been updated with modern cases and developments on the global stage and goes into detail of how change can be achieved without simply trying to shout louder than others.' - Roger Ingham, Professor of Health and Community Psychology, University of Southampton, UK
