

‘Courage, Language, Discretion and Learning’: Lancelot Andrewes and Early Modern Religious Culture

20th – 21st March, 2020, University of York, UK

We are pleased to announce that registration for a conference on Bishop Lancelot Andrewes has now opened. We very much look forward to welcoming attendees to the University of York in March.

Since recent re-assessments of his work, this conference will be the first to explore the writings of Bishop Lancelot Andrewes (1555-1626) and his engagement with early modern cultures of religion, literature and learning. Andrewes was the most renowned elite preacher of his generation. His sermons were celebrated by listeners, readers and poets; he occupied powerful roles in the Jacobean court, and his writings paved the way for later reforms in the English church. Andrewes was a famous polemicist, a major translator of the King James Bible, an internationally respected scholar, and an influential teacher at Cambridge. This conference intends to explore his writings in all their variety.

The conference will feature plenary addresses from Peter McCullough (Lincoln College, Oxford) and Kathryn Murphy (Oriental College, Oxford).

Sponsored by the Centre for Renaissance and Early Modern Studies, University of York and the Society for Renaissance Studies.

Registration

We are pleased to announce that registration is open.

The registration fee for external attendees is £22. Registration is free for members and affiliates of the Centre for Renaissance and Early Modern Studies at the University of York.

If you are an ECR or post-graduate researcher who would like to attend the conference, we have a travel bursary available, generously funded by the Society for Renaissance Studies. Please contact Tilly Zeeman andrewes2020@gmail.com if you are interested.

Registration and details of the program can be found on the CREMS website and <https://lancelotandrewes.wordpress.com/>.

Contact details

If you have any questions or queries, please email Dr Joseph Ashmore and Tilly Zeeman at andrewes2020@gmail.com.

