

Client: University College London
Source: Daily Express
Date: 14/12/2018
Page: 14
Reach: 380632
Value: 5147.64

Ingham's WORLD

john.ingham@express.co.uk

CITY slickers are sexier than country bumpkins, says the Smithsonian Tropical Research Institute. Panama City's male tungara frogs sing faster, more complex and catchier songs than their rivals in the jungle, reports Nature Ecology & Evolution. Females opted 3-1 for the townies when given a choice.

CATTLE have been beasts of burden since Stone Age man stalked the land. They were used to pull loads in 6000BC or 2,000 years earlier than once thought, a University College London team tells Antiquity. The cows were used to drag logs in the Balkans three millennia before anyone even dreamt up Stonehenge.