Call for Papers

At the Intersections
Fourth Annual Conference
Friday 17 May 2024
SOAS, University of London

We seek individual presentations and full panels (up to four papers) which are based on empirical and theoretical work which draws on the Black feminist theory of intersectionality and addresses the intersections of multiple inequalities, categories and structures.

We welcome and encourage submissions from researchers at any stage of their careers from a wide range of backgrounds. You do not have to be a Race, Migration, and Intersectionality Specialist Group member to attend.

Guest keynote speaker to be announced soon!

PSA Race, Migration, and Intersectionality At the Intersections Fourth Annual Conference

Friday 17 May 2024
SOAS, University of London

At the Intersections is back for its fourth edition! We invite you to join us for a day of panels and presentations about all things intersectionality in the social sciences and humanities. The conference aims to:

- Bring together political scholars researching intersections of social inequalities, structures or categories including - but not limited to - race, class, disability, sexuality, and gender.
- Encourage engagement across political science and political sociology, across methodological approaches and inclusive of diverse scholars.
- Create a community of Early Career Researchers who share these commitments.

We seek individual presentations and full panels (up to four papers) which are based on empirical and theoretical work which draws on the Black feminist theory of intersectionality and addresses the intersections of multiple inequalities, categories and structures.

Suggested topics include but are not limited to:

- Intersecting inequalities in academia, public life, policy, and other realms
- The politics of identity
- Brexit, Trumpism, and backlash politics
- Parliamentary politics and representation
- Methodological frameworks for intersectional research
- Intersectionality and policy at the local, national, and international levels
- Social movement organising and grassroots activism
- Co-optation of intersectionality
- Diversity, inclusion, and anti-racism in higher education

This conference will be in person, but we will make provisions for participants to join online if they can't attend in person.
