University of London, Senate House, Room 104, Thursday 7 May 2015

Education and culture are closely related. Their interdependence is all the more relevant in a globalised age when cross-cultural challenges such as sustainable development jeopardise cultural and belief frameworks through which communities self-identify and interact. The conference aims to address the extent to which and the ways in which education can contribute to fostering cultural, social and political self-awareness and collective self-determination.
